Comments/caveats	Data source should be the business plan not a separate projection in order to avoid the risk of over estimation. Only new jobs actually created should be counted, which excludes jobs maintained (as too problematic to assess). It relates to employment when the project is up and running, i.e. if the project is creation of a farm shop, it does not include employment created during the design/construction building phase – consultant/architect/builders, but the employment which is created when the shop is running (manager, sales assistants, etc.). Voluntary work should not be counted but self-employment is included. Indicator is calculated in FTE; therefore, if an existing halftime job is transformed into a full time job, the value of the indicator is 0.5 (a half job is considered created). To count one job created, the duration of the contract should be one year or more (e.g. a six month contract at 100% is 0.5).
